Word from the Consul General

Dear Swiss Friends, dear Friends of Switzerland,

It is with great pleasure that this Consulate General awaits the forthcoming visit of Swiss Federal Councillor Schneider-Ammann to China. Our minister of economy will be accompanied by a high-level business delegation and will also visit Shanghai on the 12th and 13th of July 2012. It will be possible to meet him at an event organised by SwissCham Shanghai in the evening of Thursday the 12th. The purpose of this official visit to China is to further promote bilateral economic relations, which happily continue on an ascending path. Trade and investment keep growing significantly - there are Swiss company openings in the Yangtse Delta Region every week - and tourism continues its steep upward trend with 38% more visa issued by this Consulate General during the first 5 months of the year; we expect, though, that the growth rate of Chinese visitors to Switzerland will diminish in the coming months.

Given the challenges Switzerland faces in Europe and other parts of the world, the dynamism in its relations with China is very good and welcome news. It contributes to a Swiss economic outlook which is above average compared with that of our European friends – let us hope and see to it that reality exceeds expectations!

Yours sincerely,

Heinrich Schellenberg

Our Consulate General

Visa Section

In our last edition, we started off the series "Our Consulate General" by reviewing our economic section. In this issue, we would like to continue this series by introducing our visa section.

The visa section is the biggest and one of the busiest sections in our consulate, dealing with all kinds of different questions and tasks concerning visas.

Somebody wanting to apply for a visa will first need to schedule an appointment online. On the day of the appointment, they will then encounter Liu Li (Peggy), Hu Yiwen (Evelyn), Feng Xia (Wendy) or Zhang Xi (Chris), who in the morning take turns at servicing our three counters and accepting visa applications, checking them for completeness, interviewing applicants, and answering questions. In the afternoon, when the counters are closed, they are all busy processing visa applications and providing services over the phone.

Team of the Visa Section at the Consulate General (missing on the picture: Mr Elmar Meyer, Mrs Grisel Sandoval Schellenberg and Mrs Christine Ammann)

For more information regarding our Visa Section please refer to the following website:

Visa section

Apart from those working “on the front line”, there are also quite a few people working behind the scenes:

There is for example Beatrix Hagmann (Consul, Head of Visa section) and Elmar Meyer (Vice-Consul, deputy Head of Visa section). When the visa section is busy (and it always is), so are they, coming up with new ideas on how to best shoulder the ever increasing number of visa applications, ensuring that everything runs as smoothly as possible, keeping in touch with their colleagues at other visa sections, dealing with extraordinary cases, to name just some of their tasks.

With Daniel Berset, (Attaché, Visa section) we have something like our very own Swiss version of Sherlock Holmes at the consulate: Just like Sherlock, he uses his rich experience, his intuition and his wits to do his job, but unlike Sherlock, he checks passports, visas, visa applications and related documents for forgeries.

Last but most certainly not least are our “helpers in need” – our Visa Officers Grisel Sandoval Schellenberg, Michael Vogel and Christine Ammann, who came to our rescue at a time when the visa section was literally flooded with applications and therefore struggling to process them in a timely fashion.

With the number of visa applications steadily increasing, our visa section will most likely remain the biggest section in our consulate.

Organization of the Swiss Abroad (OSA)

What is the OSA and what does it do?

OSA is short for “Organization of the Swiss Abroad”, and is a non-governmental organization dedicated to representing and safeguarding the interests of the Swiss abroad, as well as strengthening the sense of togetherness within the Swiss community and helping to maintain the ties of the Swiss abroad with Switzerland. The activities of the OSA are based on four main pillars – informing, linking, lobbying and advising.

The probably most well-known “product” of the OSA amongst the Swiss abroad is the magazine “Swiss Review”: 408'000 copies in either English, French, German, Italian or Spanish, are distributed twice a year amongst the enrolled Swiss abroad. The Swiss Review, which is also available as an online resource at www.revue.ch, aims to keep the Swiss abroad informed about events and developments in Switzerland.

With regards to both safeguarding as well as the establishing of links between Switzerland and the Swiss abroad, as well as the Swiss abroad amongst themselves, the online platform www.swisscommunity.org plays a very important role: apart from current news from and about Switzerland, listings of all Swiss Clubs and announcements of OSA-events, it also contains an online community platform which facilitates discussions as well as the exchange of news.

The third pillar of OSA's activities is “lobbying” – representing and safeguarding the interests of the 10% of the Swiss population living abroad. The Council of the Swiss living Abroad (CSA) is the highest organ of the OSA, with its main task being to safeguard the interests of the Swiss communities abroad in Switzerland. Through the “Swiss abroad” Parliamentary Group, the CSA has a strong link to the Federal parliament helping it with its work: the introduction of postal voting for the Swiss abroad for example is the result of CSA's efforts, and it is now campaigning for the introduction of electronic voting for all Swiss abroad.

Regarding all matters concerning emigration from and remigration to Switzerland, OSA offers free advice to Swiss citizens, for example concerning military service, health insurance, education etc.

Art on Ice May 26 and 27, 2012

"Art On Ice," the popular ice-skating and music performance, came to Shanghai's Mercedes-Benz Arena once again on May 26 and 27, 2012, after its success last year with Lang Lang leading the musical cast.

Staged by Infront China, Art on Ice, which was established in 1995 in Switzerland, is a figure-skating show based on the compelling theme of figure skaters performing to live music. Art on Ice uses different styles of music - classical, cross-over, pop and etc. Like last year, China's top pair Pang Qing and Tong Jian led the line-up. During the show in 2011, Tong proposed to Pang. Pang and Tong performed with pop star Li Yuchun (also known as Chris Lee) in a romantic routine featuring Lee's song "Moon on the Sea."

The show also boasts several world figure skating singles champions, including Stephane Lambiel of Switzerland (who, however, had to cancel his trip to Shanghai in the last minute due to an eye disease) and Japan's Daisuke Takahashi and Miki Ando. European ice dancing champions Nathalie Pechalat and Fabian Bourzat of France also took part in the show.

From a figure skating rink in Küssnacht to the Mercedes Benz Arena in Shanghai, Art on Ice has come a long way since 1995. The pipe dream has turned into a recognized brand and a global event. Today, the most successful figure skating gala production in the world plays to 70,000 spectators a year in Switzerland – and in China it had 26 million fans glued to their TV sets. One reason for its success is that the basic concept can be varied. No matter whether a soul diva or a tenor is singing, the choreography of Art on Ice remains a colourful interplay of top athletes and music greats. Year after year Art on Ice is able to surprise fans, thanks also in part to innovations in stagecraft and lighting engineering.

June 23, 2012, Piano recital by Louis Schwizgebel-Wang

Switzerland was once again represented on Shanghai's art scene in June with a piano recital by Louis Schwizgebel-Wang, a young Swiss pianist, at the Oriental Arts Center on June 23, 2012

Born in 1987 to a Chinese mother and a Swiss father working in the visual arts, and grandson of a famous Chinese painter, Louis Schwizgebel-Wang began studying piano at the age of six with Franz Josefovski. Three years later, he was admitted to the superior level of the Lausanne Conservatory in Brigitte Meyer's class. At the age of fifteen, he graduated with honours as a soloist. He is currently pursuing his studies at the Universität der Künste in Berlin with Pascal Devoyon, with whom he had taken advanced classes at the Geneva Conservatory already.

Louis Schwizgebel-Wang gave his first concerts when he was just nine. Ever since, he has repeatedly performed on the most prestigious international stages and also played for radio and television.

In 2005 he won the Second Prize in the Geneva Music Competition (no First Prize being attributed that year), as well as the Coup de Coeur Breguet Prize and the Prize awarded by the Public. In January 2007, he won the First Prize in the Young Concert Artists Audition in New York as well as eight special prizes, which opened the doors to the finest North American concert halls and orchestras. He gave recitals in Washington's Kennedy Center and New York's Carnegie Hall and received excellent critics from the Washington Post and the New York Times.

June 27, 2012, piano-movie show

Apart from traditional performances in the concert hall, Louis Schwizgebel-Wang together with his father Georges Schwizgebel, who is among the biggest names in the contemporary animation, gave a unique piano-movie show at Minsheng Art Museum on June 27, 2012. Louis played several classical pieces of Swiss composer Heinz Holliger, Ravel, Schubert, Chopin and Liszt while his father's prize-winning art-house animation films were displayed in between. This perfect combination of music and visual arts was to the biggest pleasure of the public.

Swiss Biotech Association event

On the occasion of the visit of the Swiss Biotech Association, the Longemont Hotel in Shanghai was on Tuesday, May 22 the site of a Dinner Reception organized by the Swiss Business Hub along with swissnex China, and kindly hosted by Consul General Heinrich Schellenberg. Shanghai was the second stop of a one-week fact finding trip in China. The trip that started in Guangzhou, headed up north to Shanghai and Suzhou, and ended in Beijing. A total of 10 Swiss SMEs from the Biotech sector participated in this fact finding trip and were all present for the reception in the Longemont. Among the 45 attendees were also officials of the Shanghai Biotech association as well as several of their local member companies. The good mix between Swiss and Chinese parties allowed for an open exchange of views and opinions as well as an exploration of further cooperation possibilities between members from both sides. While the Swiss are looking into the constantly growing and changing Chinese pharmacy market, the Chinese side also seems equally interested in expanding their operations into overseas markets.

Presentation of the book Wirtschaftswunder Schweiz (The Swiss Economic Miracle)

swissnex China had the pleasure to receive Mr. R. James Breiding, co-author of the book Wirtschaftswunder Schweiz, at its premises end of May 2012. The latter traces Switzerland's path to wealth by documenting the exciting and often turbulent developments of key companies and sectors. During his presentation the co-author gave a short overview about the content of the book. He placed a special emphasis on the Swiss capacity of innovation and adaptation. Furthermore, his various examples from the watch industry to the orthopedic industry or the Swiss made hearing aids gave a good insight of how the Swiss economy is changing and adapting constantly to new technologies and trends. Another important aspect he underlined was the egalitarian attitude and culture of the Swiss and the reasons, which lead to the latter.

swissnex China BBQ Lecture Series Switzerland Wonderland?!

On May 31, 2012, R. James Breiding held a speech on punctuality at the first BBQ lecture series at the Minsheng Art Museum, which is a cooperation between swissnex China, Minsheng Art Museum and Pro Helvetia. The topic of this year's BBQ lecture series is "Switzerland Wonderland?!", discussing "Swiss Time", "Nature", "Arts", "Philanthropy" "Wealth" and "Innovation".

While Mr. Breiding focused on how the Swiss came to their attitudes on punctuality and precision, Professor Tina Zhou from the Research College of Luxury Goods and Services from the University of International Business and Economics in Beijing talked about Swiss watches in China. After an interesting Q&A session, the organizers and partners invited the audience for further discussions on the topic while having the barbecue.

Preview - Nestle in China: Localized to the Limit

The company, or more so, many of its products are world famous. Nestle, the world's biggest food company, provides food solutions for every stage of life - from baby food to clinical nutrition. The Bridge talked to Roland Decorvet, who is heading Nestle's China operations. Internally, Decorvet is simply referred to as "Chairman D" by his 47'000 employees in China.

To understand Nestle, one has to understand three things about Switzerland, the son of a Swiss farmer says. "Switzerland is a decentralized country, we strongly believe in a consensus, and going through the ranks for example in the Swiss army, is part of our culture", says the former Corporal of the Swiss army.

In China, the Swiss food giant is taking localization to new heights. Whereas most Swiss food companies in China are emphasizing and trying to capitalize on their "swissness", Nestle takes a different route. Despite the advantage of having a globally known and well trusted corporate brand, Nestle wants to keep developing local Chinese brands that it has acquired. Often, it does so without even putting the Nestle logo on its products. Today, already 60% of the company's China sales come from such joint ventures. Nestle is keen to meet the local Chinese taste, as food is most obviously different in China. The solution is food products tailor made for Chinese palates.

Decorvet is highly confident for this year, as their business is not export dependent or affected by the appreciating Yuan. Almost 100% of what Nestle produces is domestic demand driven. Also, the mega trend of urbanization in China is going in Nestle's favor, as city dwellers are much less self-sufficient in terms of food supply. Plus, the increasing purchasing power of lower income classes goes hand in hand with a higher quality food demand.

Why does "Chairman D" expect the next five years to be "golden years"?

Find out and read the full interview in the July issue of The Bridge!
