Introduction	The Beijing Economic and Technological Development Area, also known as the Beijing Development Area (BDA), is the only State-level development zone in the Chinese capital, which enjoys policy privileges granted by the State to both State-level development zones and State-level high-tech industrial zones. According to the general plan of BDA, it covers 46.8 sq km, which includes an industry area, a business area and a residential area. BDA is about 20km from city center Beijing, 25km from Beijing Capital International Airport, 140km from Tianjin Xingang Port. BDA started its construction back in 1992. On August 25, 1994, it was ratified by the State Council as a state-level economic and technological development zone Beijing. The overall planned area is 46.8 sq km. The investment ratio of foreign funded ventures is over 70%. The BDA favours foreign-funded, high-tech and export-oriented enterprises. The BDA also favours electronic information, pharmaceuticals, automobile industries and others. After over a decade's development, under the supports of high and new-tech industries and modern manufacturing, all the economic indices of BDA have increased by a large magnitude over the years and the development momentum has remained strong. During the period of 1994-2008, five major indices of BDA (GDP, total industrial output value, sales revenue, financial revenue and taxation revenue) had the annual average growth rates of 56.86%, 66.24%, 76.54%, 73.02% and 54.08% respectively. Though debuting one decade later than the first batch of national class economic &amp; technological areas, BDA has ranked high among its counterparts in terms of comprehensive economic indices.
